PREAMBLE

In today's knowledge-driven world, the strength of any nation lies in its ability to innovate, conduct meaningful research, and protect the outcomes of that research through well-defined intellectual property rights (IPR). As society continues to evolve with rapid scientific and technological advancements, it becomes essential for researchers, academicians, and students to understand the deep connection between societal needs, responsible research practices, and the legal frameworks that safeguard creativity and innovation.

This workshop on Society, Research and IPR is designed to build awareness and strengthen the research ecosystem by emphasizing the social relevance of research, the ethical responsibilities of researchers, and the importance of securing intellectual property. It aims to empower participants with foundational knowledge of patents, copyrights, trademarks, and emerging issues in IPR, while also highlighting how research outputs can contribute to national development and societal well-being.
